More information

Sgt Clyde A. Vaughan enlisted on 3 March 1941 in Pasadena, California.

The plane was attacked from behind by two and eventually 4 enemy fighters. Sgt Clyde A. Vaughan first reported that his oxygen system was out after the attack. However, Sgt Clyde A. Vaughan was hit in the face and his upper body by 20 mm enemy shells. He died almost instantaneously. S/Sgt Richard O. Tobias, Left Waist Gunner, was the last one to see him in his lethal condition. Sgt Vaughan was found near the plane by a French priest who was a Prisoner of War and worked in a Hospital in Lingen, Germany. One of the Waist Gunners was wounded and had been brought to this hospital. Here the French priest told him he buried Sgt Vaughan at the Lingen cemetery, in a section for Prisoners of War, and knew his name by means of the dog tags.

All of the crew members bailed out, became Prisoners of War, and they met each other again in Le Havre, France, after their liberation.
