More information

Soon after leaving the English coast en route to target, it appears this aircraft was hit by friendly fire when a gunner from another A/C in formation test fired his guns. The A/C caught fire and the pilots could not maintain, control going into a steep dive and spin. A few of the crew were able to bail out before the A/C hit the water of the English Channel. Only two were picked up by Air Sea Rescue, and the rest were listed as MIA until they were declared dead a year later.
