The aircraft was being flown by 1st Lt Glen E. Both were feathered and, as the plane was losing altitude, the crew threw out guns, ammunition, etc. Lt Rowe decided to land on St. Trond airfield. On the approach, realizing he was landing long, he tried to go round again but the plane crashed, ripping off the landing gear and fire broke out in the bomb bay and fore of this. Lt Rowe and the tail gunner, S/Sgt Howington were killed and the radio operator, T/Sgt Frank J. Janik, is believed to have suffocated.
